Prologue

A storm raged across the forest, and with each roar of thunder, kits cried even louder for their mothers. Almost all other cats huddled in their dens, waiting for the storm to be over. One cat stood alone, watching her clan as they sheltered from the rain. Although she, too, wanted to seek shelter in her den, she had to make sure her clan didn't scatter again.

A flash of lightning lit up the whole forest, and struck a lone oak, setting it on fire. The flames spread up the tree, and set the grass ablaze. It didn't go unnoticed by the she-cat though. She yowled an alarm to the rest of the clan, who set off running in all different directions.

"Fire, fire!" A gray tabby queen exclaimed, and gathered up her three newborn kits. The queen began nudging the kits away from the spreading fire, but they weren't really going very quickly.

The she cat yowled to her clan yet again; but it was drowned out by the sounds of the rain. She watched as one of the kits fell to the ground.

"Shadestar, what are we going to do?" A dark gray tom shuffled over to her, his eyes showing that he longed to run.

Spiritstar sighed. "We can't let our Clan scatter, not again!" She said with desperation.

"Again?" The tom questioned. Shadestar looked away. "But... I-I don't remember our Clan scattering."

Something began to echo through her head. A time of great darkness is coming. Hearts will be shattered, and nothing will ever be the same. She pushed the thought away. She couldn't remember that, not now.

"DawnClan, regroup!" She yowled. The Clan stopped running, and turned to face her. "We must stay calm! We must not scatter!"

She turned away, to face the camp entrance. "Follow me." She ordered. "Lightningfur, Mudsplash, make sure everyone stays together." Two toms, one light brown and the other golden furred with black tabby stripes, nodded and stood up.

Shadestar began to lead them away from camp. A sense of knowing passed through her. You can't just ignore the prophecy forever... Stormfeather whispered in her mind.

She shook her head, arguing with the voice. But I will not bring attention to it! I'm only concerned about keeping my Clan safe. "Is everyone still here?" She called out to her Clan.

One of the cats gave a distressed wail. "Silverpaw is missing!"

A growl sounded from behind her. Shadestar turned to look. A russet to held a whimpering Silverpaw. Behind him, others stood. Too many to take on.

"Looking for this?"
